甲骨文

Oracle Bone Script

甲骨文是中國現存最早、體系較為完整的文字，刻寫在龜甲和獸骨上，用於記錄占卜的內容和結果。其時代大致在公元前14世紀至11世紀的殷商時期，主要發現於河南安陽殷墟，距今已有3000多年。迄今出土甲骨共約16萬片，總計單字字數約5000個，可釋字約1500個。甲骨文把中國的信史向前推進了約1000年。

殷商時期的甲骨占卜，內容十分豐富，如：祭祀、戰爭、田獵、氣象、生育、車禍等。殷人無論大小事都要進行占卜，以求得祖先和神靈的保佑。

Oracle bone script is the earliest surviving and relatively complete system of writing in China. It was inscribed on turtle shells and animal bones, and was used to record the contents and results of divination. It dates from the Shang Dynasty (14th century BC – 11th century BC), more than 3,000 years ago. About 160,000 pieces of oracle bones have already been unearthed mainly at Yinxu in Anyang, Henan Province. There are about 5,000 single characters identified on the oracle bones, and nearly 1,500 characters could be interpreted. The oracle bone scripts have pushed the recorded history of China forward by about 1,000 years.

Divinations through oracle bones in the Shang Dynasty cover almost every aspect of daily life, such as rituals, wars, hunting, weather, reproduction and accidents, etc. The people in the Shang Dynasty would perform divination for everything to seek blessings and protection from their ancestors and deities.

「庚戌」是占卜的日期，「咎」是貞人（商代進行占卜的神官）的名字。這版刻辭一是問商王種植黍是否有好年成；二是問「畫」這個人應否向商王進貢牛。

'Geng-xu' refers to the date of divination while 'Ke' (咎) is the name of the zhen ren (a spiritual officer who performed divination in the Shang Dynasty). The inscription aimed to divine whether there would be a harvest if millet was grown and whether Hua should send an ox as a tribute to the Shang king.

金文

Bronze Inscription

金文是商周時期（公元前17世紀—前221年）鑄或刻在青銅器上的文字，用於記錄祀典、賜命、徵戰、盟約等事件，以及對祖先及王侯們功績的頌揚。商周時期的青銅器大多是祭祀用的禮器，由於古人把銅稱作金，這些文字被稱為「金文」。

Bronze inscription is the writing cast or carved on bronze vessels in the Shang and Zhou Dynasties (17th century BC – 221 BC) to record ceremonies, decrees, battles, treaties and the eulogies to imperial ancestors and nobility. Most of the bronze vessels in the Shang and Zhou Dynasties were ceremonial vessels. Since the ancients called copper and bronze gold, the bronze inscriptions are therefore literally known as 'gold writings' in Chinese.

司母戊鼎 (又稱后母戊鼎)

Simuwu Square Cauldron (Ding)
(or Houmumu Square Cauldron)

商代晚期，1939年河南安陽武官村出土。

Late Shang Dynasty, unearthed in Wuguan Village of Anyang, Henan Province in 1939.

該鼎是目前已知中國古代最重的青銅鼎。鼎腹內壁鑄有「司母戊」三個字，「戊」是器物主人的廟號（中國君王死後在廟中被供奉時的名號），此鼎可能是商王祖庚祭祀母親戊而鑄造。由於甲骨文及金文中有不少反寫的例子，有學者認為「司」應為「后」，代表器物主人生前的地位。

This cauldron is the heaviest bronze cauldron from ancient China ever discovered. There are three characters '司母戊' (Si Mu Wu) engraved inside the vessel of which '戊' (Wu) refers to the temple name (a name given to a deceased Chinese emperor for ancestral worship in temple) of the owner, suggesting that it was probably made by King Zugeng of the Shang Dynasty in honour of his mother. Since there are many examples of reverse writing on oracle bones and in bronze inscriptions, some scholars suggest that the character '司' (Si) should be '后' (Hou, literally 'empress') instead, representing the status of the owner during her lifetime.

內底銘銘文32字，是記載有關武王滅商這一重大歷史事件的唯一文物遺存。簋是盛放黍、稷、稻、粱等飯食的器具。廣東地區流行「九大簋」之說，意思是豐盛的飯菜。

There are 32 words cast inside the vessel. It is the only extant relic recording the significant historical event of King Wu's conquest of the Shang troops. Gui is a food utensil for keeping rice and millet, etc. In Guangdong, a popular term, 'Nine Big Gui', refers to a sumptuous meal.

小篆

Small Seal Script

春秋戰國時期（公元前770年—前221年）諸侯割據，字形、讀音各有差異。秦統一六國（公元前221年）後實行「書同文」的措施，把秦國原來使用的大篆修改成為小篆，統一了全國的文字，推動了社會經濟文化繁榮。

During the Spring and Autumn Period and the Warring States Period (770 BC – 221 BC), feudal lords ruled the country, and the Chinese characters have different forms and pronunciations. After the unification of six states by Qin (221 BC), the measure of 'writing in the same script' was implemented. Small seal script was created as the common writing in the whole country to replace large seal script which was formerly used in the state of Qin, promoting social, economic and cultural prosperity.

嶧山刻石

The Stele of Mount Yishan

秦始皇二十八年（公元前219年）李斯立，是小篆的代表作，內容為頌揚秦始皇功績。

Written by Li Si in the 28th year of Emperor Qin Shihuang (219 BC), this stele is a prominent example of small seal script that extols the achievements of Qin Shihuang.

隸書

Clerical Script

隸書起源於戰國晚期，到漢代成為主流字體。隸書將小篆圓轉的線條改為方折並簡化，書寫起來更為方便。自此，漢字的象形性消失，筆畫逐漸定型。由小篆發展至隸書的過程稱為「隸變」，是漢字由古文進入今文字階段的分水嶺。

Clerical script originated in the late Warring States Period and became the mainstream writing in the Han Dynasty. It simplified and transformed the round strokes of small seal script by replacing them with squares and folds, making it easier to write. Since then, the pictographic nature of Chinese characters disappeared and the strokes of characters gradually formed. The development from small seal script to clerical script is the watershed from the ancient to the modern stage of Chinese characters.

正始石經 Zhenshi Stele

刻立於三國魏正始二年（公元241年）。因碑文每字皆用古文、小篆和漢隸三種字體刻寫，也叫三體石經。刊刻石經的主要目的是弘揚儒學，也有校正文獻內容的作用。

Carved in the 2nd year of the Zhengshi reign of Wei in the Three Kingdoms Period (AD 241), this stele is also known as the three-script stele because each character of the inscription is written in three forms including ancient characters, small seal script and clerical script. The main purpose of the inscription was to promote Confucianism and standardise the contents of literature.

楷書

Regular Script

楷書形體方正，筆畫平直，可作楷模，故名楷書，加上筆畫簡潔，便於印刷，使楷書成為最大眾化的書體，也就是我們今天通用的標準字。楷書始於東漢（公元25年—220年），至隋唐時期（公元581年—907年）趨於成熟。

The regular script is characterised by its square structures and upright strokes, making it a model for writing. Hence, the name of regular script was given. Additionally, its simple and clean strokes are convenient for printing, making regular script the most popular style of writing and the standard characters we commonly use today. Regular script originated in the Eastern Han Dynasty (AD 25—220) and matured during the Sui and Tang Dynasties (AD 581—907).

九成宮醴泉銘

Inscription on the Li Spring at Jucheng Palace

唐貞觀六年（公元632年）刻立。唐代楷書石刻，魏徵撰文，歐陽詢書，記述唐太宗在九成宮避暑時發現醴泉之事。

Erected in the 6th year of Zhenguan of Tang Dynasty (AD 632), this stele of Tang Dynasty bears an inscription in regular script written by Ouyang Sun. The content composed by Wei Zheng records that Emperor Taizong of the Tang Dynasty found the Li Spring when he summered at the Jucheng Palace.

漢字的藝術：印章

The Art of Chinese Characters: Seals

印章歷經三千餘年，逐漸發展成為集書法、章法、鑄造、刀法於一體的獨特藝術，早期主要蓋在泥塊上，風乾變硬後便可作加密之用，後來發明了紙張，才蓋於紙上。於方寸之間、紅白之中，印章創造了漢字各種美的結構和形式。

Seals have a history of over 3,000 years and have gradually developed into a unique art form that combines calligraphy, layout design, casting and carving techniques. Initially, seals were used on clay blocks which once dried and hardened could serve as a means of authentication and security. With the invention of paper, seals began to be applied to paper as well. Within the limited space of the seal and the interplay of red and white, seals create a variety of aesthetically pleasing structures and forms of Chinese characters.
